

Do you know the hidden dangers of gas theft?

Tampering with a gas or electricity meter is seriously dangerous, so please be vigilant and stay safe, by reporting anything suspicious to Stay Energy Safe.

What can go wrong?

If a large amount of gas escapes from a tampered meter and builds up in the air throughout the building, it could lead to a powerful and devastating explosion.

Gas fumes displace the air in a room and can cause headaches and loss of consciousness. Leaking gas is also highly flammable, and could cause a fire at the flick of a light switch.

What to look out for:

Back to front meter

Smell of gas around or near to the meter

Meter is working but showing no credit

Rubber piping or hoses attached to the meter

Meter dials not working or the digital display is blank

Meter dial has disappeared
